| 1   | What types of critical/independent thinking were involved?   |
|  | When we were solving the problems, he always made us think and participate. Some of the questions were in need of more logical thinking.  |
|  | Tasks, tests, student participation   |
|  | Solving various problems based on graphs, answering questions in connection to the material and sometimes anticipating what comes next.   |
|  | Actual questions from recent Economics.   |
|  | Make important decisions, understand how firms and consumers react to changes in prices for example.  |
|  | It allowed me to develop a better perspective view about economics, which will be useful in my future encounters.   |
|  | The course helps us to think straight and how to make the right decisions if we want our own successful business  |
|  | The exercises were very useful for me because it changed my way of thinking and my personal view on economics. It actually gave me this opportunity to understand why certain economic phenomena are happening. |

| 2   | What is your overall assessment of this course? Why?   |
|  | Very clearly!   |
|  | He is relaxed while teaching and no one has problems with him.  |
|  | Petar Stankov was the best! And the readings he gave were very helpful but the lecturer didn't help me very much understanding the material.  |
|  | Petar Stankov is very helpful, easy to listen to. His sessions were the best part of my Saturday.   |
|  | My overall assessment is based on the usefulness of the course both exercise sessions and lectures.   |
|  | Because the exercises are very interesting, we have the chance to participate and argument questions, and explanations are given in understandable way with useful examples.                                    |
|  | We gathered more knowledge and put it into practice.  |
|  | I didn't attend all the lectures, but the exercise sessions were very useful and helpful.   |
