

Course Name: FIN 204 – Money and Banking

Instructor: Stankov

Semester: Spring 2010 – Final

What are the primary strengths of this course (course materials, instructor, specific approach enhancing student learning)?

- Homework assignments really helped in understanding the material.
- Instructor is very good.
- Course material excellent. Instructor knows what he is talking about.
- Clear outline. Good examples and explanations.
- We are all encouraged to participate.
- The instructor is very understanding and is always available to help a student grasp the concepts.
- Instructor is knowledgeable and helpful. Slides are easy to get to + understand.
- Relating the course to what is happening on the current world economy
- Instructor
- I really like prof. Stankov's laid-back, discussion-provoking style.

What are the primary weaknesses of this course?

- A little bit dry. Hard to pay attention.
- Could be organized better.
- Instructor might not present course material enthusiastic enough
- Lecture can be monotonous + hard to follow
- Preparation for exams is minimal.
- Being on a Thursday afternoon
- Not enough mathematical money + banking

What would you change about this course? Do you have any specific recommendations that would enhance the learning?

- More homework. Field trips.
- Nothing.
- Should take place in a smaller classroom => that would maybe cause a better learning atmosphere.
- N/A
- Nothing
- A wider variety of teaching methods (group discussion, movies, etc.)